Out of everything. Thought I was hungry before. Had no idea.

Found James last night.

Was his hair always that long? He acts all friendly, but it's a trap.
Set up camp. Alternating watch. First shift.

Scratching outside. Whittling? Too loud to sleep. Ray and James haven't budged. Why?

Woods always around. Everywhere, on everything I touch, words I don't remember writing.
Even here on this page. Did they do it?

If one doesn't get me, the other one will.

Mom, Dad, if you find this, I love you. I'm sorry for all the times I forgot to call. I'm sorry I told Dad I didn't want to come home this summer. I'm sorry I blew up at Mom when she said I always put school before family. I'd do anything to take it all back. I'd do anything to be with you right now. I'm sorry I'm writing this down alone in the dark in the middle of nowhere. Maybe I deserve this. I'm so sorry.

Ray said he doesn't want to hide anymore. James is trying to talk him out of leaving, but maybe Ray's right? NO, of course not.

Ray's "keeping watch" tonight. Someone should be watching out for him.

I can't sleep. There's that sound again. Less like whittling. More like scraping.
