

SUPERNEUTRAL

I'VE STUDIED ALL KINDS OF CODES AND CIPHERS JUST TO INTERPRET THINGS LIKE NUMBER STATIONS.

THE MOST USEFUL THING WE LEARNED FROM IT WAS HOW TO PASS SECRET NOTES IN CLASS!

ATBASH

A great starter cipher. Perfect for encoding notes to a friend!

Z	Y	X	W	V	U	T	S	R	Q	P	O	N	M	L	K	J	I	H	G	F	E	D	C	B	A

SUBSTITUTION CIPHER

One letter equals another. Fun to invent, tricky to decode. You can even use made up characters!

Hint: If "A" is "M," does "M" HAVE to be "A"?

MORSE CODE

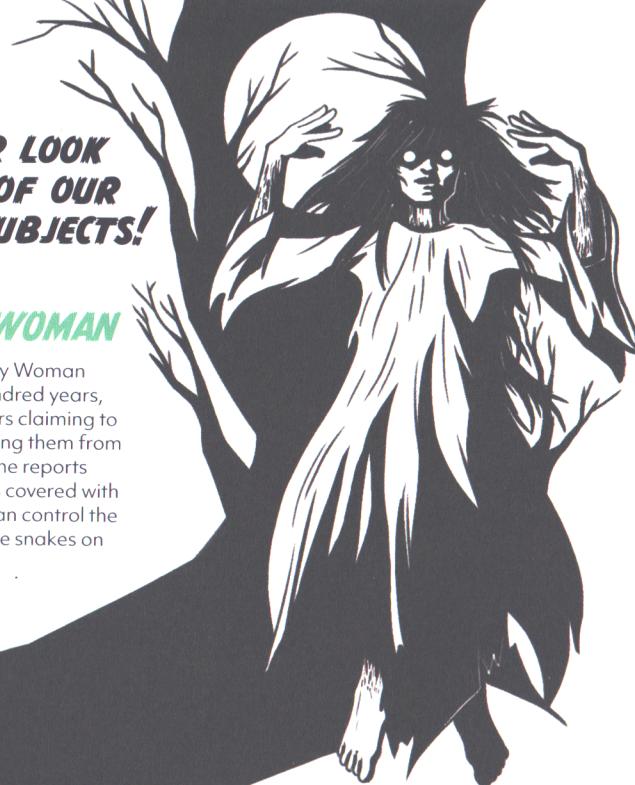

Reaching back almost 200 years, Morse code was one of the first languages used to send messages electronically. When writing Morse code, individual letters are separated by a space, while individual words are separated by a forward slash (/).

FAVORITE SUBJECTS!

THE HAIRY WOMAN

Sightings of the Hairy Woman date back over a hundred years, with Maryland settlers claiming to have seen her watching them from the tops of trees. Some reports say her entire body is covered with fine fur, or that she can control the long hair itself, like the snakes on Medusa's head.

AXE MURDER HOUSE

An entire family brutally killed in their beds. All unable to escape their killer, and now unable to move on to the next world. Legend has it this unfortunate family still roams the halls of their ancestral home. Unlike the classic image of many ghosts, they are said to still bear the grisly wounds that killed them. The family's patriarch has even been spotted with the axe that did his family in, and he is rumored to be searching for retribution.

RESURRECTION MARY

Travelers driving down a particular Chicago road at night often find themselves beckoned to pick up a hitchhiker: a young woman seemingly in need of help. As beautiful as she is somber, this mysterious figure always vanishes from the car before reaching her final destination, in some tales, leaving something of hers behind.

THE DEVIL'S TREE

Rumor has it that a long time ago in New Jersey, a farmer killed his family and then hanged himself from a tree on his property. Today, that tree still stands. It is said snow melts around it, satanic symbols appear carved into its bark, and anyone foolish enough to attempt to chop it down will likely find themselves suffering a most unfortunate fate.

LIZARD MAN

In the 1980's, a teenager in South Carolina narrowly survived an encounter with a seven-foot-tall, slimy, green, red-eyed creature. Sporadic sightings of the mysterious Lizard Man continue to this day, but they once hit such a zenith that a million-dollar bounty was placed on its head, drawing hunters from all around the area.

KNITTING BETTY

Once an unlikely spy for America during the Revolutionary War, poor Betty was captured and beheaded. Her spirit still haunts the woods in Somerset County, NJ, eternally knitting. Some say Betty is more than happy to add your flesh to her tapestry if you're foolhardy enough to run afoul of her!

THE DONKEY LADY

After a Texas man's son accused a woman's donkey of biting him, the man led a mob to the woman's house, setting fire to the building. Perhaps the fire distorted the woman's appearance, or perhaps her soul merged with that of her beloved pet, but to this day stories of a woman with the head of a donkey are whispered. She's said to have gone mad, wandering the countryside and looking for people to bite.

THE SQUONK

The saddest of all cryptids, the Squonk is local to Pennsylvania, struggling to hunt (and even walk) due to its loose, ill-fitting skin. The Squonk evades capture by dissolving into a puddle of tears. Who doesn't feel like a Squonk sometimes?
