NOTES...

OPEN BAR

Bartender ran out of ice. Sent me out to get some moments after the Bayou Balladiers started playing, and I missed 20 minutes of their set. *Shakes Fist*

Total vomit fest. What do you expect when you have an open bar that runs for FIVE AND A HALF HOURS?

Passed out go-cups for last call. Thankfully we were able to shove everyone out the door within the next 10 minutes.

LIVE MUSIC

Bayou Balladiers started 45 minutes late. Maybe they'd have gotten there faster if they were the Bayou Uptempoers?

Played their full set and Petit Mort went on right after. Even so PM's set got cut short by half and they were NOT happy. When they complained, I told them I was just an intern.

DINNER

Lady complained her etouffee was cold. I told her I was just an intern.

I didn't get to try anything but that take-home blueberry cobbler they passed out right before last call. Everyone just ate them at the party anyway.

BLIND AUCTION

Started 10 minutes late, and then they added another 20 minutes to the bidding. RICH PEOPLE!

Jeremy's remarks only added 3 minutes total. That guy is a total pro!

Got bored halfway through the night, so I tried to get some intel on the identity of Monsieur Zeppo La-La-La, the "clown in chief" from Tous les Bouffons.

Whoever he is, I bet he's some kind of public figure. Maybe a politician?

Bidder paid for this absinthe spoon, never picked it up. I guess she was enjoying the party so much she forgot to come back. I might have accidentally marked it as retrieved, and now it's been so long I can't return it. please don't tell anyone.

AND OTHER REVELRY

Cops showed up. Probably a three kings first?

OK no make that TWICE!

Dining room table Flipped over by meathead twin-bros 15 minutes or so before last call.

Filmmaker lady complained, but I told her I was only an intern... just like I told EVERYONE ELSE! *Sigh*
