

Make sure to get a shot with Lillian smiling for once. They need to look like they actually like one another.

Rising stars ~~CROWD FAVORITES~~ TAKE THE LEAD

Harrison didn't know what he was saying. Write that he said "Lillian and I have been working hard, and our next performance will exhibit the fruits of that labor" or similar.

Ice skating has quickly become an obsession in the small town of Three Pines, Colo. The tremendous number of famed skaters to begin their careers there is remarkably uncommon. The revenue the ice rink brings to town has nearly doubled within the last five years. Nearly every resident follows the competitions and attends the workshops offered at Three Pines Ice Rink.

Having won the ~~adoration~~ ^{reverence} of ice skating fanatics and those with an appreciation for athleticism alike, soaring sensations Harrison Campbell and Lillian Varma continue to gain support for the work they do at the rink. While judges evaluate performances according to the skaters' precision, balance, composure and gracefulness on the ice, the ice skating fan base of Three Pines tends to evaluate each skater's charisma, creativity and courage. Campbell alone has won ^{to be exact} several awards in his career and regularly receives roses after competitions and even at open practices. Meanwhile, Varma's social media fan base continues to grow each day.

Campbell and Varma have both quickly made their way into the spotlight as icons among enthusiasts, each projected to enter the Olympics within the next year. Surprising many, they have decided to take an unexpected career move: choosing to skate as doubles partners after lifelong solo careers. However, as they prepare for the American Skating Association National Tournament, it feels ^{natural} smart that the two would team up. Having skated at the rink since early childhood, both skaters' skills undeniably match those of the other.

When asked how the auspicious partnership was developing, Varma said, "We're both great skaters, some would say the best in Three Pines, so it makes sense that we would work together to stay the best both in Three Pines and beyond."

Meanwhile, Campbell had this to say: "I was worried that working with Lillian Varma was going to be like working with a cross-eyed pigeon with two lopsided left feet, but now that we've had some time to really vibe together, I now know that she's actually a pretty good skater after all."

Only time will tell whether this duo will rise to the town's expectations. However, with Campbell's new line of merchandise surpassing financial projections and his fan base growing by the day, it is certain that not even a rough performance can shake this town's infatuation with Harrison Campbell.

No! Re-write. Needs to promote Harrison's merch more effectively. Needs a little more mention of Lillian. No negative talk about Harrison and Lillian's future! I am not paying you to undersell my son!
