Hey there, Car. Could you do me a huge favor and mess around with the practice schedule so my team and Lourdes aren't on the ice at the same time anymore? Things got pretty tense just now. I may have said and done some immature things, but in my defense, he started it. Don't let Lourdes tell you any different.

I need my students to have a stress-free environment, and Lourdes is deliberately trying to get under Lillian's skin. It may seem harmless now, but no one wants anything to escalate further.

Also, we need to do something about that reporter. He's constantly violating all of our privacy. I filed a report with the higher-ups in the organization already, but they're not getting back to me.

I'll look over the schedule on Monday and see what I can do. No promises. You may just have to learn how to share. Please submit separate issues as separate tickets in the future.

Request: Mrs. Donnelly,

As I've told you before, it is absolutely imperative for Harrison's brand mission to get increased traction and visibility right now. We need to make him AND his merch line a household name by the time Olympic season rolls around (fingers crossed that all goes well with the ASA tournament of course — I think he's got a real shot at gold!). Anyway, I'd like to propose that Harrison be allowed to bend the rules in a teeny tiny way and add his brand's logo to the back of his costume. I promise you that it will be in the very best taste, only big enough to be picked up by the cameras. Plus, beyond the practical reasons, I know it would mean the world to him. He came up with the logo and motto all by himself right after his last win, just like he came up with the design for his new phone accessory; everything in his line has a deeply personal meaning to him. He's told me more than once that the tagline in particular can show people his heart and soul. It would mean so much to him if you showed him how much you really care about the students as individuals by letting him express himself. He might even be so grateful as to shout out our favorite skating outreach program.

Well as you yourself have stated before, I only enforce the ASA's rules, not make them. Any sort of lettering is explicitly forbidden on costuming in competitions as per the organization's guidelines. You may include the logo on the costume, but it cannot include any lettering.

Carol - I realize this is an awkward thing to bring up, but you were supposed to arrange for Nathan's office to be cleared out weeks ago. It's been gathering dust for quite some time now.

I will see to it eventually. I have not been in the correct mindset to take inventory, you understand. Nathan's family has also yet to contact me, as they have more pressing matters to attend to. And I refuse to throw out his belongings. The room is secure for now. That should be sufficient.
