

Dear Coach Lourdes,

These past few weeks, I've been doing a lot of thinking, and ~~then~~ I made a few realizations. First and foremost that I am such an idiot for talking to you the way I did. I am so sorry. I let myself forget the history we had together and acted out in the moment. I truly never meant to hurt you or let you down, just like I'm sure you haven't really meant the things you said to Coach LaPalma recently.

Even though we didn't always see eye to eye, you were always straightforward with me. Coach LaPalma, on the other hand, is a liar. He'll say whatever he needs to say in the moment to make you like him, believe in his vision. But he's all surface.

Training under him has made me feel lonelier than I've ever been in my entire life, even though I'm surrounded by more people than ever, ever since Coach LaPalma and that terrible woman convinced me to pair up with Harrison.

I thought about coming back. Coach LaPalma said it would be a waste to, but I think you were right. He doesn't care about me. He never did. I ~~then~~ have to finish what I started I guess. Please understand. Maybe after the competition, we can revisit our old contract?

I don't know. Even if you're not my coach anymore, your opinion still matters to me.

Sincerely,
Lillian

I knew you'd come to see reason. LaPalme is nothing but hollow promises. Have faith that we can work something out soon.

Good luck with him until then.
