WALK-INS AND APPOINTMENTS

Hello again Detective,

I really can't thank you enough for helping me get into both Celestine's studio and her computer. After seeing all of those posts she saved on the desktop, I think it's pretty clear the following people are our suspects: Mason, Dillon, Jay, Nonah, Cyril, and Ines.

Everyone on that list appeared to be having a feud with Celestine right before she died, even though I thought they were all close to her. I can't believe I was so blind to everything that was going on. I mean, I knew Ines and Celestine were fighting about her documentary, but they fought about a lot of things. I didn't think it was that serious. This whole time I believed we were still the "Bywater Babes" and that everything was still like the old days on Royal Street. I really thought Celestine and Ines were my family and that we were a part of this amazing Carnival community that loved and supported us. But was any of it real? I don't even know anymore.

I haven't even gone to any MKML meetings since Cel was killed. I just can't deal with Ines right now. After the second line, she went into overdrive trying to run the krewe... straight into the ground. And it's not just me who has a problem with her acting like a desperate understudy. A third of the krewe has either quit or just stopped showing up.

When we first started MKML, it was our entire lives. Maybe I lost myself in it, and maybe Cel did too. But when I was walking around her empty studio looking for clues, I saw a side of Celestine that I'd never seen before. The pieces I'm sending you, her artwork, say so much more about her than I ever could. She always appeared so strong to me that I neglected to see her truth. The truth about where she came from and how that affected her. After everything she's done for me, she deserved better than to be left to rot in a tomb.

And so here we are. I pulled some entries from a crime blotter website to get a better picture of the night Cel died, but it hasn't helped so far. The police have ignored my requests for any official documents, so the only real lead we have right now is that VuMail Drive account Cel had linked on the desktop. The password hint is "latest subject." At first, it made me think of the krewe, because she had designed our signature MKML sunglasses throw just that week, but I guess I was wrong.

Besides that, I've tried everything else I could think of. None of it worked, so I'm just sending everything over to you. I've collected anything I could possibly tie to Celestine's work, and I mean anything. I'm even sending a suncatcher that she had resting on her easel. It might seem silly, but I don't know. I'm including it with everything else.

I also found so many papers on her desk, it almost drove me insane. She would definitely say that she had her own organization system for the mess, but I couldn't make heads or tails out of it and just grabbed what looked relevant to either her work or the suspects—an article about the Krewe of Versailles, a police report, and so on. I just have to hope that at least one of these things can help us get into her account.

There's a direct link to the VuMail Drive on our shared desktop. To access it, you can log in at royalstreetcase.com using the new password, BEIGNETS (Celestine's favorite). Once you've figured out how to get into Cel's VuMail Drive account, go ahead and try logging in with whatever the password is. Once you've opened it, send me an email with the subject line DRIVE and the password in the body. That way, I can get in too.

I'm counting on you to crack this,

Sybilina Jones

Don't forget to send me the password once you figure it out!
